

Please do not weaken the "No Call" List. I still recieve a few telemarketing calls, mostly people looking for donations, but it is so much better than it used to be. If I cancel a service, the last thing I want is to be hasseled by them for a year and a half. It was my choice to cancel and that should be respected. As a working parent I don't get as much time with my son as I would like, I really dislike having what time there is interrupted by telemarketers.
